VIVANDIÈRE

THEY DREW NO PAY.

THEY HELD NO RANK.

AND THEIRS IS THE CIVIL WAR STORY
NEVER BEFORE TOLD.

From independent studio James Temple Films comes the astounding story of the vivandières (vi-VAHN-dee-ays), the indomitable women who served as front-line battlefield nurses during the Civil War.

SET AT THE WAR'S HEIGHT in 1863, the hourlong TV special follows one vivandière from each side as they venture into the meat grinder of the Missouri battlefields. Far from home, they must face dangers beyond what they see on the firing lines, from officers who scorn them to murderous guerrilla fighters who would never spare a woman. But when the two vivandières meet, they discover they share an instinctive code of right and wrong that transcends the causes of the war, and together they will fight for it with courage, daring, and an unflinching sense of mercy in the midst of massive inhumanity.

LAVISHLY FILMED over 300 miles of country, locations in “Vivandière” range from impeccably restored mansions to a stunning action scene aboard a historic steam train, while the eight-member stunt team brings a palpable sense of danger to the battle scenes. Most of all, “Vivandière” boasts a sterling cast, graced with veteran performers like Ron Ford and Wes Deitrick (over 100 film and television credits between them) and standout newcomers.

At the center of the piece is BREAKOUT STAR ROBIN BLACK (pictured above), a natural actor recruited from the ranks of the many Civil War reenactors who answered the casting call. Just fifteen when she was cast, Black's work heralds a new kind of heroine, radiating power and conviction without saying a word, and a talent guaranteed to go far.
